

Pain Specialists of Southern Oregon is pleased to announce Dr. Brett Quave, M.D. and Dr. Daniel Kim, M.D., joining our team starting January 1st, 2022, in Medford Oregon. Both Dr. Quave and Dr. Kim joins a team of board-certified physicians, Dr. Joseph Savino, M.D. and George Johnston, D.O.

Dr. Brett Quave, MD pursued a career in the healing arts and graduated from Loma Linda University School of Medicine in 1999. After a transitional internship at Kettering Medical Center in Ohio, Dr. Quave completed both his Anesthesiology Residency and Pain Medicine Fellowship at Loma Linda University Medical Center. Upon completion of his training, Dr. Quave practiced at Desert Pain Care in Palm Springs, California, and was then recruited to the Pacific Northwest to build “Water’s Edge,” a large, hospital-based pain practice in Yakima, Washington. Dr. Quave was the founder and Medical Director of Quave Clinic Pain Centers.

Dr. Daniel Kim, MD was a National Merit Scholar and received a full tuition scholarship for his undergraduate education at Andrews University in Michigan. Dr. Kim then earned his medical degree from Loma Linda University in California, where he received the Whole Person Care Award. Dr. Kim completed his physical medicine and rehabilitation (PM&R) residency at Rutgers NJMS / Kessler Institute in West Orange, New Jersey, which was ranked as the top PM&R residency hospital training program on the East Coast, according to US News & World Report. Dr. Kim then completed his pain medicine fellowship at Mid Atlantic Spine with Dr. Frank Falco, who has been a clinical associate professor for Temple University and was a previous president of The American Society of Interventional Pain Physicians.
